

MOVING OUT OF PARENT'S HOME FOR MARRIAGE-Are u ready yet?

Legally, marriage is accepted in many countries especially America from ages 18-21. Marriage can be a very frustrating choice if one is not ready. In my own words I will define marriage as a union of two different people. It is not an easy task for two different people to become one in everything, it takes time.

My question is "Are you ready yet?"

At ages 18-21, are you able to take care of yourself; Are you organize; Do you have the knowledge about marriage?; Can you take care or accommodate someone of your age or above? Can you let things go easily in other for peace to reign, i.e. can you forgive?; Are you mentally ready for decision making involving you and your partner?; Can you deal with emotional, financial, and a new family stress?; Are you honest to yourself or some one else?; Are you compatible with your partner; and finally are you ready to be committed to a long lasting relationship with just one person?

I don't know if I have covered all but these are the important questions one has to take into consideration before moving out of parent's home to get marry.

I understand that apart from answering the above questions which would only help one to prepare for marriage and its tasks, there are a lot of other things that triggers the ignorant decision of moving out of parent's home for marriage. They are: peer pressure, parental pressure, stress-(emotional, financial, abuse/maltreatment from parent or guardian), infatuation, etc.

I think one should understand that "marriage is not a bed of roses" so no matter what conditions you may find yourself, don't make marriage the first priority of escaping out of problems because this may not be a solution but only a way to add up to the statistics of divorce.

References:

From my personal/social experiences.